

Maggie Dunn

Maggie Dunn is the Founder of House of Providence. She and her husband together with their two biological children, have dove into serving children and have added 6 children from foster care to their family over the years. After years of seeing the brokenness of the foster care system and the children it's meant to serve, Maggie and her husband were burdened to make a bigger impact. They opened House of Providence in 2014. Over the years, they have seen a level of success in bringing stability and healing to children that the status quo in foster care says is impossible! She has created a model called HOP Model to help children thrive. They have opened multiple homes and added an academy for learning.
